A non-stress test (NST) is often done between 41-42 weeks and involves tracking the baby's heart rate with a monitor for a minimum of 20 minutes.